Referee Insurance

Cover under the above is afforded to all referees who are members of Referee Societies whenever they officiate in England. Details of the scope and cover are published on www.rfu.com. Cover does not apply to matches played outside the Season.

In addition to the “normal” accidental death and disability the Rugby Football Union also has Public Liability Insurance as an integral part of the Compulsory Scheme although it is under a separate policy. The limit of indemnity is £5,000,000 for each event. It should be noted that cover does not operate in respect of incidents arising out of a deliberate breach by the insured person of RFU rules, directives and regulations.

Details of any claim or potential claim under the Public Liability cover should be notified immediately. Under no circumstances should there be an admission of liability, as such action could prejudice the rights of an indemnity.

The Public Liability element also extends to referees officiating abroad with the knowledge and permission of their union.

General

Personal accident cover whilst travelling to and from matches is separate and in addition to one’s own car or public carriers insurance. Whilst travelling abroad, referees would be well advised to effect tour insurance for the additional cover afforded.
